Administrative History

George Richards & Co. founded the Alexandria Gazette on February 5, 1784, although he originally called it the Virginia Journal and Alexandria Advertiser. It changed its name to Alexandria Times and Advertiser on April 14, 1797. In 1800, Samuel Snowden acquired the paper and his family owned it for over 100 years. He changed the name to the Alexandria Gazette in 1808. The Snowden family sold the paper to Charles C. Carlin in 1911, whose family owned it until 1973. Over the years, the paper's ownership has changed hands several more times and later merged with the Alexandria Port Packet. Prior to becoming a weekly in 1974, the Gazette was the oldest American daily newspaper in continuous publication. Today the newspaper is owned by Connection Newspapers and it's published weekly as the Alexandria Gazette Packet. It is recognized as the City of Alexandria's oldest operating business.

Scope and Content

The Alexandria Gazette Photograph Collection consists of 4.5 linear feet and spans the years 1953-1993, the bulk of which is from 1970-1986. The newspaper used these photographs to accompany their news articles. Dated photographs in this collection often correspond to the date they ran in the newspaper. Subjects include Fairfax County politicians, local residents, county officials, schools, churches, and other buildings and events in Alexandria, Mount Vernon, Groveton, and Fairfax.

Subjects:

Alexandria (Va.) – Newspapers

Fairfax County (Va.) – Buildings, structures, etc.

Fairfax County (Va.) – Politics and government
